Interested in a challenging professional career?

Consider studying law librarianship. If you thrive in a fast-paced environment and enjoy being part of a highly skilled team, this may be the career for you. Law librarians are essential not only to law firms, but have vital roles in federal, state and local courts as well as in academe.

Begin your Master's studies at CUA's Department of Library and Information Science and earn an M.S.L.I.S. specializing in law librarianship to become well versed in legal literature, skilled in legal research, and attuned to how law libraries are managed. Spend a semester in a practicum gaining real-world experience at one of the many federal or private law libraries here in our nation's capital.

Wish to pursue two degrees simultaneously? CUA also offers an M.S.L.I.S./J.D. joint degree program with Catholic University's Columbus School of Law, allowing students to earn dual, complementary degrees.
